COMMENT OF THE DAY

UNAMERICAN

THE former US service-man, Andrew Fortuna, who opted for a life in China rather than repatriation after the Korean armistice, has now returned But it is sickening to read the torrid, contemptuous reception given him by a group of hostile pressmen at San Francisco. What they set out to prove was that he was incapable of rational thought or conduct assuming that no American in his right mind would desert to the enemy. And although one news agency said he contradicted himself frequently during the Press inquisition, his answers made fair reading

HONGKONG DOLLAR DRAIN PLUGGED

From RONALD BOXALL

London, July 5. The British Government has moved to stop a drain on the gold reserves caused by purchases of Canadian and other foreign securities by British investors This is a serious drain on through Hongkong. In the four months to the end of April more than £12 million worth of additional Canadian stocks were bought by British investors - partly through Hongkong. In April alone the total value of "new" Canadian stocks available to British investors reached £5.25 million. the sterling area gold and dollar reserves at a time when every effort is being made to strengthen them.

Chancellor Exchequer, Mr Thorneycroft, has therefore announced measures to plug this leak to take effect from midnight to-, night.

Hongkong is one of the main centres in the sterling area where a free market in foreign securities exists. British investors havequito legally—been taking advantages of this to cash in on the present boom in Canadian stocks. Without additional supplies from the sterling area free markets, the London market is restricted to dealing in Canadian stocks already held by UK residents. And there just aren't enough of them to satisfy demand.-London

The smuggling chain passes neross Europe, allowing the director to include shots of entacombs. Athenian rooftops, sinister alleyways and. as Victor Mature is supposed to be a member of the United States Anti-Norcotte Squad, the dockland area of New York is thrown in for good measure. .

It is exciting quite often if you don't find Victor Mature's heavy cynicism too false or Anita Ekberg's much vaunted sultry coolness too calculated and there are some good performances from the supporting players. Watch out for Sydney Taffer, always a sound character actor, as Curtis and Bonar Colleano as Amalio.

It Is Tender

High Tide At Noon:

This picture is set in Nova Scotia and tells of the hard life of the lobster fishermen there. The love story woven through it is tender and underplayed, as is usual in this type of British film and contrasts well with the violence of the beautifully photographed неавсарев.

I admit that I am particularly addicted to shots of mountainous waves breaking on rocky shores and stormy landscapes generally, but you would have to be the most obstinate landlubber to be left unmoved by the photography in "High Tide At Noon".

Offsets

That fine actor, Alexander Knox is her father, ruling the island people with firmness and understanding with, by his side, wife-played by Flora Robson. The quietness and wisdom of these two offsets the wilder and more passionate natures of the younger folk.

Things do not go smoothly for Joanna even after she has chosen one from among the three and hanging over her herself with unerring aim at the dwindles.

I liked this picture and recommend it to those who are tired of unngster pictures, westerns and sophisticated elegance covering a lack of story.

My Glory Behind Wimbledon Week

THINK I know what "the long road back" really means. L If spirit alone, determination alone, or struggle alone could have won my goal. I still would be the girl with the Golden Racket.

Heartsick and desolate (after her break with Norman Brinker) I returned to San Diego and arranged to go riding the next day with two friends.

I was in the operating room for four hours. All my right leg and calf muscles had been severed, the fibrila bone broken, and, of course, a lot of skin on my leg had been ripped away. For three days and nights I was heavily drugged.

There is, I think, a silver lining to many tragedies, and for me there were threads which, woven together, gave life a new meaning, a new purpose. Part of this pattern unfolded one afternoen when the nurse annunced a visitor, a Mr Connolly.

THE MAN WHO COLLECTED SATCHELS

66711HE social revolution," Warriner said, "has impinged upon our statesmen in varying degree. Jones still sends his boy to Eton. Smith, who is in equally high office, and who sits next to Jones whenever the PM calls a Cabinet, buys his boy a brown canvas satchel and sends him to day-school round the corner. This story is about Smith."

"And about Smith's boy?" Elrick asked.

"Certainly, It's about Gervase Smith, who is thirteen." "No Smith," Byatt said, "whether boy or man, was ever called by so affected a name as Gervase. The idea's absurd. Warriner smiled, "I'm just calling these people Smith," he explained, "It wouldn't be quite proper to give the real name, even in a confidential communication to the club. Particularly as my story displays Smith-Smith Senior, that is-in rather an absurd light."

"But we shall be able to t identify him if we hunt round among members of the Cabinet for one who has a son named Gervase?"

"Dear me, no!" - Warriner's smile grew momentarily blander. "I've invented Gervase's name

"I'm not quite sure where to begin Gervase's story. My own connection with it started when I bumped into him—or he bumped into me-in the street.

"One of the simple habits of the Smiths' household is that the boy often does his homework in his father's study. I've sometimes met him there, and shaken hands and passed the time of day, when visiting his

SCHOOL BUS

"He was on his way to school on the top of a bus-which was his custom-whom an elderly man sat down beside him and entered into conversation. Gervase regarded this as a situation which should be met with reserve. He therefore, fished out his Kennedy's Latin Grammar and applied himself.

"But this interested stranger very much; schoolbooks, he said, were different nowadays, and he would like to compare Gervase's with those he used to have himself.

"Gervase thought this impertinent. So he put Kennedy "I didn't think anything of it, back in the bag strapped it up

"At this the woman awore the "The bus was going at no satchel hadn't been opened and.

"Gervase's father had been talking in his study to somebody very important indecti. A map had been required—whether of Europe or Asia, I won't say.

"Smith Senior had simply grabbed his son's atlas, and the two statesmen had drawn on it certain proposed lines of demaxcation of the highest interest to another power. And then Jane came in,

THE ART OF MAKING MONEY

SAYS THE MAN WHO SUDDENLY -FOUND HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE

OR the greater part of 10 years 50-year-old Bill Harries from Abertridwr, in Glamorgan, has been a millionaire. But at what precise point in his career he became one he has not the slightest idea.

Neither has his wife Anne. Nor their sons, Fred, who is 26, and Stanley, aged 23. And as for five-year-old Jayne-well she has never heard of millionaires anyway. For years, of course, Bill Harries knew that he was rich. Very much richer than most men. For early in life he discovered that he had the way to fortune.

But it was not until he went to see a lawyer about the problem of death 'duties that 'he realised how rich he had grown. The lawyer looked at the figures Harries laid out about the Regentone radio and TV business he had built up. And he told him it would be darned hard to convince the Inland Revenue that he was not worth "at least a million."

He is the hardest man in the world to choose a tie for. The quickest man on earth at buying a hat. He is so sure of his own flair for clothes that he never gives the matter much thought.

He is more confident, and, let us admit it, more elegant in a 20-year-old suit than his wife in her latest Dior.

And though he may have lost much of his bargaining power in the council chambers abroad, yet he starts every argument with a foreign diplomat with one maddening advantage-his team is much the best dressed.

Far too much credit for the essential elegance of the Englishman has gone in the past to his clothes. Far too little to the man inside.

His reputation is not, let me tell you, all due to the famous London tailoring, the English hats, the Scottish tweeds. It is the shoulders inside the suit, the face beneath the hat, and the certainty of the man that whatever he chooses to wear is glossiest of American magazines, Harper's Bazaar, commissioned an artist living in London to define the elegance of the Englishman.

This is what the artist, Feliks Topolski, said: "Englishmen have a special strange telent for knowing how to dress which no one else can touch. They are born with it, and it gives them a start over everyone

"I think they have it because basically a costume always fits best the man who invented it, and contemporary men's clothes are an English development. Therefore their clothes are natural on Englishmen and slightly false on everyone else.

"They are not, as most people imagine, conservative dressers. Each man produces some slight eccentricity, some personal quality that is never wrong.

"The English have a genius for dressing strangely without making mistakes. Foreigners do the same and make themselves look ridiculous."

Now I go all the way with Mr Topolski on this. I'm with aclously giving care to choosing him too on his choice of the his clothes. to represent English elegance in America.

SPORTS ROUNDABOUT

A SOCCER PLUM FOR WRIGHT

It's being whispered backstage that he is being groomed as an assistant to England team manager and chief coach, Walter Winterbottom,

It may be significant that, this week-end, Wright reports to Mr Winterbottom at Lilleshall, not as England candidate for an FA coaching certificate, which could be his passport to a posting at headquarters.

When I tackled Mr Winterboltom on whether there was any foundation for linking the name of Billy Wright with an

THE LONE RANGER SILVER BULLETS?

TTAVE you ever wondered how the Lone Runger came to have silver bullets in his cartridge belt? We will let Fran Striker, author of "Hi Ho Silver!" scripts.

tell you: "The Lone Ranger is supposed to own a secret silver mine, hidden in the hills. A trusted old friend named Jim lives in a shack that conceals the mine.

"Jim works the mine and refines enough ore to provide the metal for the bullets and silver to be traded by the Lone Ranger for cash to meet his needs,"

In the early days of war ammunition, the materials used in bullets were cast iron, bronze, lead, brass and even glass. At the end of the 16th century the name "bullet," which means applied only to ammunition Menard, for small arms. Between bullets have been found. 1880 and 1890 steel became bullets.

During the night the boys escaped with a few of the nugnets. They were found to contain silver, gold and some lead.

In later years they tried but could never again find the cave or the mine. They believe the Indians covered them so the white men wouldn't find them.

SATURDAY, JULY 6

PORN teday, you will find that your mest cutstanding characteristics are probably sincerity, justice and loyalty. There is a spiritual side of your nature which gives you high ethical values.

You will undoubfedly be interested in programmes which offer equal opportunity for all. You read widely and will seek to adapt the good of the past to present conditions, but, you will do this more as an educator than as a reformer.

You may think that you are astute in the ways of business. but you must guard against being imposed upon by those who are not as open and above-board as you are. If you don't watch out, you may get caught in a serious dilémma from which it will be difficult, if not impossible, to extricate yourself.

You are fend of nature, yet you seem to thrive on the busy turmoil of city life. Occasionally, however, you need to retreat to the country and restore your physical and nervours energies. You are inclined to be moody and castly depressed. This can usually be traced to mental fatigue; once you have restored your faculties, you will find that you are back on the rails again.

You are good at business details and should be able to make money to be passed on to the generations to come. There is, however, a deeply spiritual and aesthetic alde to your nature. You enjoy fine music and you take pleasure in beautiful paintings. In you women, this love for the beautiful may express itself in a craving for fine clothes and beautiful jewels; in you men, a desire to become a patron of the arts or a collector and connoisseur.

You have a pleasing personality and make friends wherever you go. You have high enthusiasms, but sometimes you do not have the energy to earry them through as speadily asl you wish, and are then inclined to get restless and frustrated. Learn to find some enjoyment in minor triumphs until your tenacity and determination have gained your major objective.

Exert caution in marriage. Wait until your enreer is determined and you are on the road to success. On the other hand, don't wait so long that you have become too "sot in your ways" to adapt to the fifty-fifty give-and-take essential to wedded happiness.

Discards Can Spoil Slams

IF you were South how would you play the spade slam after a ten of hearts opening?

You would take the acc of hearts and note the play of the six from East. Then you would play four rounds of trumps (discarding two hearts from dummy) and five rounds of clubs in order to get rid of your two losing hearts.

West would have to make four discards and if he were alert they would all be diamonds. East would have to make three discards. One would surely be the deuce of hearts; the other two would be low diamonds.

At this point you would be pretty sure that East held the king and queen of hearts and one diamond and that West Orly airport, near would hold the nine of hearts Paris, was the and see and either queen or jack seeme of two odd of dlamonds depending on what

'GOOD

Nottingham, July 5. The run-glut in the third cricket Test at Trent Bridge was over this afternoon when Peter May, the England captain, declared England's mammoth innings closed with 619 runs in the bag for the loss of six wickets.

The spectators were probably as relieved as the West Indians when the announcement came. Modern cricket no longer tends to heavy steamroller tactics as used a quarter of a century ago by Ponsford and Bradman.

The whole 619 runs were scored at a faster rate than run a minute, which is as much a tribute to Goddard's elever technique of getting in as many overs as possible, as the flowing strokes of Graveney, Richardson

AMPLE REVENCE

Tom Graveney had ample revenge on the visitors who removed him from the Test grena at Lords for a "duck." Gravency's total of 30 fours in his marathon innings of seven hours end 55 minutes gave some indication of the strength of his driving.
